Faux Finish

Advantage Garage Doors reflect the simplicity, functionality, and livability so closely associated with Cape Cod Style.

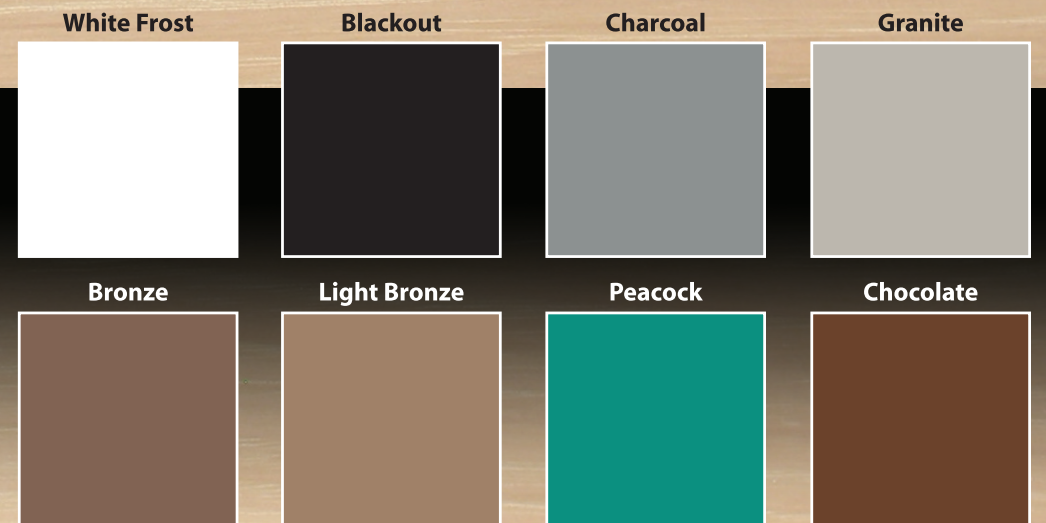

The simple lines typical of Cape Cod Style are striking when painted to either complement or contrast your home's exterior.

Cape Cod Style is known for its durability and practicality in withstanding the harsh winter climate of New England's coast. The Finishing Touch

Decisions about style, wood, and finish made and measurements taken, production on your custom made garage door is ready to begin. The woods used to build your door are hand-selected from the finest lumber available, and they are also kiln dried, which eliminates worries about the possible use of green materials and further ensures the reliability and longevity of your door. Not only will our craftsmen hand-construct your door, they will also hand-distress it if you select that finish option.

Questions Answered

Our experienced professionals can give you information and insight on wood species, color choices, paint vs. stain finish, or installation. We are available to meet with you where it's most convenient for you: your home, your building site, or our offices.

Care and Maintenance

As with any investment, care must be taken to maintain your door's attractiveness and longevity. Included with your door will be maintenance instructions, which will differ dependent on whether you have selected a paint or stain finish. Whether working with a high quality exterior paint or a penetrating stain that is water repellent as well as UV and mildew resistant, it is imperative that the inside, outside, and all edges of your door be re-painted or re-stained periodically. The time period between regular maintenance is influenced by environmental factors such as your door's exposure to sunlight, but is generally every one to two years.
